

Morning Announcements

The Office of Highway Safety reminds you that it's the law in Delaware for the driver and all passengers to wear a seat belt, even in the backseat. And right now, during Click It Or Ticket, officers are watching extra closely. So if you or anyone in your vehicle isn't buckled up, expect to get a ticket.

Seat belt use is 10% lower at night, but the risk of being in a crash is three times higher. So no matter when or where you drive, always wear your seat belt. And make sure all passengers are buckled up, even in the backseat. It's the law in Delaware. Click It Or Ticket.

Fewer people wear their seat belts at night, although your risk of being in a crash triples. The Delaware Office of Highway Safety reminds you that during Click It Or Ticket, officers are watching, particularly at night. Expect to see night time checkpoints and patrols out there this week—and if you or anyone in your vehicle isn't buckled up, you will get a ticket.

The Office of Highway Safety reminds you that it's the law in Delaware for the driver and all passengers to wear a seat belt, even in the backseat. A ticket will cost you at least 25 bucks, and if you have a Graduated Driver's License permit, your license could also be suspended. Click It Or Ticket.

Don't put your license—or your life—at risk. It's the law in Delaware for the driver and all passengers to wear a seat belt, even those in the backseat. And right now, during Click It Or Ticket, officers are watching—particularly at night. Expect to see checkpoints and patrols this week in the evenings. And if you or anyone in your vehicle isn't buckled up, you – the driver - will get a ticket.
